OUR JUROR

ABOUT MIRIAM DAVIS

Making things has been the greatest pleasure and source of satisfaction in my life. I have engaged with a number of different materials, but my first serious work was with clay, making pottery for several years and then figurative sculpture. In the 90's I took up painting on paper and canvas, and painting came to be my primary art form. I like making marks in a variety of ways: staining, spraying, transfer, stencil—anything that works to create an atmosphere and a sense of space. As relationships among elements and between them and their surroundings develop, a non-literal narrative evolves, and landscape or undersea views may be suggested.

The desire to work in three dimensions again led me to make small shelters or houses and to experiment with various materials such as corrugated cardboard, lace, wire, and found items and from these fragile, often discarded materials, to make enclosed, safe-feeling places.

I am grateful that my life has allowed me to work so pleasurably with form and color.
